

ABSTRACT

Promoters from male reproductive tissues were isolated from corn (Zea mays). These promoters can be used in plants to regulate transcription of target genes including genes for control of 5 fertility, insect or pathogen tolerance, herbicide tolerance or any gene of interest.